

PINES AND CEDARS AFFLAME.

THOUSANDS OF ACRES OF NEW JERSEY FORESTS LAD LOST.

Blazing Tree-Tops Half a Mile—The Rescue of Seven Children—A Train Running Through a Flery Tunnel—Wholesale Destruction of Swamps and Upland Timbers.

During the last three weeks there has hardly been a day in which there forest fires were not raging in one or more places in the extensive pine and cedar groves of Ocean, Burlington, Atlantic, Cape May, and Cumberland counties, New Jersey. In soil and products these five counties are alike. Their higher grounds are covered with small pines, scrub oaks, huckleberry bushes, and a wealth of worthless, stubby shrubs of fifty or more varieties. Their low grounds, generally swampy, are covered with dense forests of valuable cedar trees, between which is an almost impenetrable jungle of tall huckleberry bushes and laurels. To the soil appears to be little else than white sand and gravel. Here and there, on the uplands, are fine productive farms and orchards, but these are few and far between. Upon the lowlands and in the swamps, of course, the wild lands are almost as rich in variety and excessive in quantity as in the deep named river bottoms of the West and South. Below the wealth of tangled brush and weeds and grasses cover a carpet of pine needles, dry leaves, and mosses. In all this mass there is hardly a square foot of ground upon which, in dry weather, a glowing spark or unextinguished match could find a resting place.

On Monday night last, the first fire of the week started between Mount Pleasant station and Woodbine, on the line of the West Jersey Railroad. Its cause is affirmed to have been that which nearly all these conflagrations are said to spring from, a spark from a locomotive. The fire, which was first seen about half past twelve, was at first small, but it soon grew to such a start when discovered that it was quite beyond control, and, at almost a rapid pace, it ran seven miles to the village of Tuckahoe, which was barely saved by the heroic exertions of its inhabitants. From Tuckahoe the fire went on to Woodbine, where it was first seen about half past twelve, was at first small, but it soon grew to such a start when discovered that it was quite beyond control, and, at almost a rapid pace, it ran seven miles to the village of Tuckahoe, which was barely saved by the heroic exertions of its inhabitants. On Wednesday two small fires were discovered in Atlantic and Burlington Counties, but they were quickly extinguished. On Thursday was a memorable day for the frequency and violence of these conflagrations. One occurred near Tuckahoe, the chief damage being done to the property of the Tuckahoe and Atlantic Railroad. ## EIGHTY BUILDINGS BURNED.

A FALLEN IN THE OIL REGION FLOODED WITH BLAZING PETROLEUM.

The Fire Caused by a Gas Explosion in a Store—Many Large Oil Tanks Endangered—Fighting the Flames—Other Serious Fires.

BRADFORD, Pa., May 9.—At 3 o'clock this afternoon the house of Justice Cline, in Bradford, a town eleven miles southeast of Bradford, was set on fire by the explosion of gas in a stove. The flames communicated to the adjoining light frame structures, and eighty buildings were laid in ashes. The list embraces the principal hotels, stores, and business places, including the Kendall and Eldred Railroad depot. The pump station of the United Pipe Lines was also destroyed. A tank containing 7,000 barrels of oil was burned, and another tank containing 25,000 barrels of oil is now in flames. A short distance further down the valley are located one other 25,000-barrel tank, owned by the United Lines, and two others of similar dimensions, belonging to the Tidewater Pipe Line.

These three tanks are full, and it is thought, cannot escape destruction. A large force of men are building dams to prevent the burning oil from running down the valley, should the tank now on fire boil over. In and around Bradford were forty derricks, which were also consumed. It is impossible to estimate the loss. Several wood fires are reported, but no serious damage has been done. At Pittsburg, Pa., May 9.—One of the most disastrous conflagrations occurring in this country in years started about 5 o'clock this evening in the stable of Kiefer, Stiefel & Co.'s, tankers on Spring Garden avenue, Allegheny. The flames communicated to the building, and spread to the other side of the street, spreading rapidly, soon taking in the Hotel, the High School, and every building on Filbert street. Owing to the peculiar position of these streets, the fire was not checked by the fire department to gain control of the flames until Kiefer, Stiefel & Co.'s tankers, which were full, were burned.

At Harrisburg, Pa., May 9.—At midnight on Saturday fire was discovered in Tracy's restaurant, on the corner of Second and Market streets. The fire, which was first seen about half past twelve, was at first small, but it soon grew to such a start when discovered that it was quite beyond control, and, at almost a rapid pace, it ran seven miles to the village of Tuckahoe, which was barely saved by the heroic exertions of its inhabitants.

At Danville, Va., May 9.—The wooden building, formerly a store, and now a residence, owned by J. B. B. of Richmond, for the storage of leaf tobacco, was burned this morning. The fire, which was first seen about half past twelve, was at first small, but it soon grew to such a start when discovered that it was quite beyond control, and, at almost a rapid pace, it ran seven miles to the village of Tuckahoe, which was barely saved by the heroic exertions of its inhabitants.

At St. Louis, May 9.—Hues, Coombs & Co.'s, tobacco and cigar store, on Broadway, was burned this morning. The fire, which was first seen about half past twelve, was at first small, but it soon grew to such a start when discovered that it was quite beyond control, and, at almost a rapid pace, it ran seven miles to the village of Tuckahoe, which was barely saved by the heroic exertions of its inhabitants.
